New York's suburbs are gaining nine persons for every four gained by Manhattan.

This shows that the suburbs are growing in population two and a quarter times faster than the old New York city. While Manhattan's gain this year is estimated at 10,000 persons, the gain of the suburbs is figured at 25,000.

Real estate operators have been studying these population statistics in connection with the 1907 tax assessment rolls, which were completed recently.

The tax rates show that the suburbs are increasing twice as fast as they are in Manhattan. From the fact that population and real estate values are progressing in a similar ratio, it is argued that the connection between them is very close.

Students of New York evolution say that the price of land promise to keep pace with the development of population. Where the increase of population is largest there is to be found the most decisive rises in land values.

New York's population has been increasing steadily since the Dutch first landed on the island of Manhattan. That it will continue to grow indefinitely is said to be sure, for the reverse is considered impossible.

And the steady increase in the value of outlying lands is deemed certain, because the people must have homes, and the natural tendency of such congested masses is to spread further and further into the surrounding country.

Heading for Staten Island. Now that the Public Utilities Commission is pushing the South Brooklyn Subway, many persons have looked over the field which will be affected by the first section only to learn that it largely has been discounted. Lots which sold for $200 or $400 before the Fourth avenue subway route was approved are bringing five times that amount. Prospective buyers are more numerous, even at the advanced figures, than sellers.

Missing the great opportunity in South Brooklyn investors are seeking choices in Richmond. They believe that the South Brooklyn subway will be extended across the Narrows, and Staten Island offers virgin field for real estate investment. Lots which sold last year in Richmond for $150 or $200 have advanced to $200. Operators say that the extension of the subway would jump prices just as the Subway has raised them in South Brooklyn or even faster, because Staten Island is the last borough to be developed. Richmond is geographically no further away than the Bronx.

William E. Harmon, of Wood, Harmon & Company, reveals that in his firm finds really good conditions on Staten Island very satisfactory to investors. He is in a position to know, for he is the most extensive operator on Staten Island, just as he was during the past eight or nine years in Brooklyn.

Bungalows for Harmon. On the northward line, Harmon is proving a popular operator as a bungalow colony.

When the Harmon and Company placed on sale 142 bungalow sites, besides business lots, home and villa plots. The bungalow sites surround a natural lake, varying in price from $100 to $200. Before the property had been on sale a month almost all had been sold. Several bungalows are being built.

The unusual demand for that class of property has induced the company to plan another bungalow section. Several large springs will be dammed to form artificial lakes, each 100 feet square. On the shores of the lakes bungalows will be placed, to be sold on the easy payment plan. The innovation will place a bungalow for summer residence within the reach of the moderately well-to-do.

Rowboats will be features of the lakes. As they are among the hills, beyond the residential section, there will be a

Spending vs. Saving.
Generally speaking, the man who spends all his money doesn't save a cent. This is not so, however, in all cases. A man can part with every cent he possesses in buying a Sunday World Real Estate bargain, and he not only saves every penny he invests, but he

Raise Prices at Rahway.
In New Jersey, not more than fifty of the 250 persons who went to see the Rahway Estates last Sunday could be conducted over the property.
